Random words in English.
I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that went unanswered as well as a much more recent thread[2] that deals with parallel typesetting with columns, on the same page, which is NOT what I'm looking for.

Random words in French.
with parallel typesetting with columns, on the same page, which is NOT what I'm looking for. went unanswered as well as a much more recent thread[2] that deals and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a

Random words in English.
I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that

Random words in French.
preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto with parallel typesetting with columns, on the same page, which is NOT what I'm looking for. went unanswered as well as a much more recent thread[2] that deals preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a

Random words in English.
I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that went unanswered as well as a much more recent thread[2] that deals with parallel typesetting with columns, on the same page, which is NOT what I'm looking for.

Random words in French.
with parallel typesetting with columns, on the same page, which is NOT what I'm looking for. went unanswered as well as a much more recent thread[2] that deals preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a

Random words in English.
I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that

Random words in French.
with parallel typesetting with columns, on the same page, which is NOT what I'm looking for. went unanswered as well as a much more recent thread[2] that deals and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a

Random words in English.

I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that

Random words in French.

preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto with parallel typesetting with columns, on the same page, which is NOT what I'm looking for. went unanswered as well as a much more recent thread[2] that deals preferably more or less automagically. I've searched the list already page, the other on the verso page, synchronized somehow by paragraph, bilingual text parallel by pages, as in, one language on the recto and came upon an interesting albeit two decade old message[1] that I'm trying to see how much trouble it would be to typeset a